NEW YORK STATE POLITICS.

Very Cheering Reports Received at the Democratic Headquarters.

At the headquarters of the Democratic State Committee most encouraging reports of the progress of the campaign in the rural dis-progress of the campaign in the rural districts are daily received.

Large gains are reported, particularly in the extreme western counties and along Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence.

It is among the farmers, who readily see the fallacy of the Protection cry, that the greatest gains are making to Democratic ideas and principles, and in the cities and large towns, where the "Free Trade" cry would have the most effect, Democracy is holding its own.

man Anson Holcomb, of the Lewis Chairman Anson Holcomb, of the Lewis County Committee, reports a remarkable revolution of sentiment in favor of the Administration, and says that his poll lisis show that Cleveland and Thurman will carry that county, which has always given Republican majorities varying from 600 to 900.

Chairman J. Clyde Johnson also sends words of good cheer from that Republican stronghold, Cayuga County, the home of Gen. Jno. N. Knapp. of the Republican State Executive Committee.

The Democratic factional fight is ended there, as it is in almost every part of the State, and a gain of from 200 to 300 votes for Cleveland is certain.

From all counties comes the good news that Hill will sweep the State like a wnirl-wind.

wind.

The Republican reports are less circumstantial. Gains are claimed by them among the workingmen of the cities, while they say that Warner Miller and his high license ideas is capturing the agricultural element.

It is thought that the hour of trouble has only been postponed, and that an effort will be made at a later meeting to secure Mr. Hewitt's indorsement when the friends of Sheriff Grant are present in less numbers than they were last night.

"If they do indorse Hewitt," said a prominent supporter of Grant in the Club, "there will be two Democratic clubs in Harlem in no time. Hewitt's friends should see that such an indorsement would do no good, and only render the opposition to him more bitter."

POWER IS BOSS, IT SEEMS.

None of the Discharged Tammany Men Put to Work by Gen. Newton.

Not one of the Tammany men who were discharged from employment in the Department of Public Works Monday has been reinstated, and this, despite Mayor Hewitt's wrathy explanation to Gen. The Tammanyites say that this only proves that Boss Power is a more potent factor in the administration of the Public Works Department than Mayor Hewitt.

TRIBULATIONS OF A CHINAMAN.

Mr. Ah Sing Confronted by the Scott Ex-Ah Sing is his name and he has

This is the first time a Chinaman has attempted to land in New York since the Chinese Exclusion bill became a law.

After four years of tossing on the deep he landed in New York, and he says he has looked upon this city as his home since that time.

He insists that he has served in the American Navy for some time and has been employed as a cook on board vessels at various times since he came to this country. He has a brother who keeps a boarding-house at 62 Cherry street, this city, where he has lived.

Last year Ah Sing shipped aboard the St. John and made a trip to San Francisco via the Horn.

From there he went to Hong Kong, thence to London, and from the latter place he has just come, having circumnavigated the globe.

A New York Girl's Terrible Death from Long Island Rattroad Train.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.) Babylon, L. J., Oct. 18 .- A young woman of prepossessing appearance, who was a passenger on the Sag Harbor express on the Long Island Railroad, killed herself last night by leaping from the train while it was going at full speed, about a mile beyond the Islip

It is believed that the girl threw herself from the platform with the intention of committing suicide, although some say that she lost her balance and fell accidentally while passing from one car to another. She was entirely alone on the train, and her manner attracted no attention from the other passenger during the trip.

attracted no attention from the other passengers during the trip.

The train was stopped as soon as the accident occurred, but when she was reached life was extinct. She had struck a heavy log by the side of the track, and her neck was broken, death being instantaneous.

From articles found upon her person it was ascertained that her name was Delia Dandercan, and it was believed that she came from New York. What her destination was the conductor who had taken up the tickets could not remember. The body is at Islip still, awaiting further identification.

CAPT. M'CULLAGH'S POSITION IN THE FLACCOMIO MURDER CASE.

But There Are Many Who Believe that the Mystery of That Open Street Tragedy Is as Deep as Ever-A Lack of Metive Shown So Far as Facts Go, Even Allowing that the Murderer Is Caught.

Police Capt. McCullagh was more positive than ever this morning that he had the murderer of Antonio Flaccomio in custody, and told an Evening World reporter who called upon him that he expected to be able to prove this fact conclusively within the next twenty-four hours.

Just how this was to be done he would not say, and all efforts to draw the good-natured Captain out and induce him to disclose some of his clues were unavailing.

The fact that he and his detectives have already been working hard for four days on the case without definite result, when five or six people claim to have seen the crime committed and have given descriptions of the murderer, has given rise to no little merri-ment in certain quarters, and the Captain seems rather nettled about some of the com-ments that have been made.

It was learned, however, that one of the

It was learned, however, that one of the new clues was information given by Albert Weber, the young German cook in the Hanover Hotel. Detective Bissert went to see the young man this morning and made arrangements to have him call upon the Captain at the station this afternoon.

The weak point in Weber's story is that, according to his own statement, he did not see the faces of the two Italians, and could give no idea of the looks of the taller of the two, who is supposed to have done the stabbing. Although he was less than three paces distant when he saw the tall man wrench his left arm from Flaccomio's right and start off at a rapid pace down St. Mark's place towards Second avenue, he only saw his back, and could not even say whether he had a stiletto in his hand or not. in his hand or not.
This led to the theory of suicide which was

This led to the theory of suicide which was advanced, I ut soon exploded.
Weber told a reporter of The Evening World this morning that he did not believe he could identify the man, whom he has already described as a tall, sparely built person with a light brown overcost or give any more definite description of him.

This description would fit Sabatino more accurately than any of the other suspected persons now in the custody of the police, and Capt. McCullagh may be banking heavily on what he expects to get out of Weber, for he still claims that Sabatino is the guilty one.

and Capt. McCullagh may be banking heavily on what he expects to get out of Weber, for he still claims that Sabatino is the guilty one. It is said, however, that the other three members of the dinner party at "La Trinacria" who, it was intimated, would probably be arrested to-day, would add to the proof which the Captain already has in possession, and in fact complete the chain of evidence against the suspected prisoner. On this point the Captain refused to give any information. The theory is that the kaife which was found on the sidewalk could not have been the weapon with which Flaccomio was stabbed, but that his adversary carried in his left hand, which he held in his overcoat pocket, a very sharp stiletto, which he plunged into Flaccomio's heart when he suddenly withdrew his arms and gave the former the shove which Weber noticed.

On the supposition that Sabatino is really On the supposition that Sabatino is really the murderer there appears to be nothing in the possession of the police which can show any adequate motive for such a crime. So far as can be learned the two men had never been on unfriendly terms, and, in fact, had very little to do with each other.

Under these circumstances it is thought by many that the solution of the mystery in which the whole case is shrouded is as far off

BEDELL IN COURT AGAIN.

But the Case in Which His Testimony I

Wanted Was Adjourned. Tombs Prison Keeper Frank Smith appeared in Supreme Court, Chambers, before Judge Barrett about 11 o'clock this morning, manacled to Forger James E. Bedell.

The latter looked bright and cheerful. His hair and mustache, of the glossiest black, had evidently received the recent and careful attention of a barber. He was accompanied by his brother Charles and a young man who was said to be a relative.

Bedell was wanted as a witness for the plaintiffs in the case of his former employers, Shipman, Barlow, Laroque & Choate, against the Bank of the State of New York, to recover the money which Bedell obtained through his crookedness.

Bedell created a sensation last Thursday by refusing to answer a single question put to him, and it was expected that he would do the same to-day.

He did not have a chance, however, for the case was adjourned by consent, because Lawyer William Allen Butler, counsel for the bank, had to try a case in the Court of Appeals, and could not be present.

The case will come up again next Thursday at 10.30 A. M. The latter looked bright and cheerful.

A HOUSE BUILT ON A ROCK.

And Which Has Made Friends of Three Generations of Customers.

When a couple wish to furnish a house they want to see a great stock of all the necessary things to-gether. There must be endless variety as to styl" and price, for one's taste and pocket have both to be considered.

An establishment large enough to suit all buy ers, we should say by the number who go there, is the old Cowperthwait place on Park Row, between the City Hall and the Chatham Square elevated stations. Here are seven stores together and full of housekeeping goods, from paintings down to of housekeeping goods, from plantings down to frying-pans, and from oilcloths up to mirrors. Here is every grade of carpet and every style of parior suit, and no end of fanoy, ordinary and cheap chairs, sofss, lounges, beds and bedsteads. There are also plenty of deaks, tables, bedroom suits, engravings, stoves and everything else, for the firm makes a point of setting you up com-nistely.

the firm makes a point of setting you up completely.

But better still, the firm makes a point of constantly making friends of their customers. The concern, having existed through three generations, has ample evidence on its own books of the value of a good reputation, and it is needless to say that you are safe in its hands.

The Cowperthwaits began in 1807 within a few steps of the present stores. Then the centre of trade, the spot is now near the centre of trade, the spot is now near the centre of travel, as the population has extended in every direction. Prom the narrowness of New York Island, we are always thinking that people are moving uptown. Of course they are; but they go to Brooklyn and New Jersey and Staten Island, too, and a giance at the map will show that the Cowperthwait stores are more, handy for the thousands of customers who come from each point of the compass than any other location could be.

Mayor.

'What are your views about the conduct of the Mayoralty?" inquired the reporter.

'Every city is its own household and it should be run as one. This city is under the control of Albany and is ruled by the Legislature. I would have a city take control of the public means of transportation, such as horsecars. It ought to control gas works and other things of that kind just as much as it does the public schools and the Post-Office. I would like it to control the sale of coal, and not let it be raised and bothered with by the coal barons. I wouldn't have any evictions. Houses that would be condemned as untenantable in Chicago they drive tenants out of here if they fail to pay a month's rent. I would have a patrol wagon and not let crowds of people trail after an officer who had arrested a possibly innocent person.

'Then I would have lodging-houses and restaurants run by the city for the benefit of the public who are in poorer circumstances."

"What do you think will be the result of your running for the office?"
"I consider myself something of a prophet but I can't tell what the result of my running will be. I shall make speeches, if halls can be gotten without paying ten times the price for them that is usually demanded. I think Mayor Hewitt should withdraw, now that I am to run. He doesn't take as much interest in the city as he does in his mills.

"Now old Peter Cooper would have made a great Mayor, which Hewitt certainly is not. I would not appoint women to all the municipal offices in case of my election. I shall distribute them equally between the women and the men. Many women are not educated up to this."

Vision, the hundred-dollar Japanese female poodle, at this outrageous remark, looked reproachfully at Mrs. Leonard and held her nose very high in the air. Vision is a thoroughbred.

party reasons," continued Mrs. Leonard.
"nor would I make judges from brewers! I am a temperance advocate, but not a Prohibitionist. I could get more halls if I were."
"Well, you will have to bustle, Mrs. Leonard," said the reporter, sympathetically.
"There isn't much time." "There isn't much time."
"But we don't take as much time as the men to do things. We go ahead without so men to do things. We go ahead without so much fuss."

"Don't have to buy up votes and get men drunk," interjected Miss Leonard, the candidate's daughter, sarcastically, interrupting her meditation over a new polonaise in a fashion plate she had in her lap.
"We would do more for the men than they do for us," said Mrs. Leonard in a heaping-coals-of-fire-on-their-head tone. "We have a motherly feeling for them. I have no fight with them."

with them These were the boards in Mrs. Leonard's platform, and the reporter left convinced that the lady knew what kind of planks she wanted.

Constitutional Catarrh.

No single disease has entailed more suffering or No single disease has entailed more suffering or hastened the breaking up of the constitution than Catarrh. The sense of smell, of taste, of sight, of hear-ing, the human voice, the mind—one or more, and some-times all, yield to its destructive influence. The poison it distributes throughout the system attacks every vital force and breaks up the most rubust of constitutions. Ignored, because but little understood, by most physi-cians, impotently assailed by quacks and chariatans, those suffering from it have little hope to be relieved of it this side of the grave. It is time, then, that the popular treatment of this terrible disease by remedias within the reach of all passed into hands at once competent and trustworthy. The new and hitherto untried method adopted by Dr. Sanford in the preparation of his Radii CAL CURE has won the hearty approval of thousa CAL CURE has won the hearty approval of thousands. It is instantaneous in effording reliaf in all head colds, sucraing, snuffling and obstructed breathing, and rapidly removes the most oppressive symptoms, clearing the head, sweetening the breath, restoring the senses of smell, tasts and hearing, and neutralizing the constitutional tendency of the disease towards the lungs, liver and kidneys.

facturer, had mysteriously left the city; that he was charged with forgery, and that the Sheriff had levied on his property.

The extent of the forgeries is unknown, but they will amount to at least $15,000. The Traders' Bank is supposed to be the only sufferer.

It is said to have been Briggs's plan to forge the names of his patrons to promissory notes and get the bank to discount them. Briggs has a family here, and is related to several of the most prominent people in the city.

He was held for trial.

Judge and Jury Wore Smoked Glasses.

days ago to Mus Nelite Baker. The marriage was kept a secret until last night. Mr. Coleman's Deputy Sworn In-

Col. Alfred H. Rogers, the new Deputy Commis sioner of Sircet-Cleaning appointed by Commis-sioner Coleman, took the oath of office before Mayor Hewitt to-day.

"One night—oh, will I ever forget it?—there was a terrible row there. A man was getting badly whipped. His daughter, a pretty, ragged little girl, tried to shield him from the blows. Finally some one picked me up and fired me at the man as she was she was dragging him away.

"What devilish motive prompted me I can't tell, but instead of striking the man I hat the little girl and crushed in her skull. She died almost instantly. The man who fired the brick was arrested and I was taken for evidence. He was brought down here for trial months ago, but through some political influence the case was adjourned and adjourned. Ludge's deak I slipped to the

"From the Judge's desk I slipped to the floor, for I knew that the prisoner was not really guilty, and after a good deal of trying made my way in here.

"Say, I see you have got a cat over on your staff. What's the matter with taking me over to hold a door open, or to keep some paper down or something?"

"I'll speak to the editor and let you know," said the reporter, bidding the brick good-day.

Since the above was written the brick has been given a position in this office.

face turn white. Trembling, he managed to push his seat away from the vicinity of that brick, and was just about making a break for the door when the brick called him back. 'Come here, don't be afraid," it called, and laughed in ghoulish glee at the reporter's fright.

By this time the reporter had regained his composure to a certain extent and was able to examine this strange freak more closely.

Really there was nothing so very alarming in its appearance as it lay on a desk apparently inanimate. It looked as if it might have been at one time a solid, substantial young brick, but it had evidently been through the war, for a big chunk was out of one corner, and it was seamed and wrinkled in various places.

in various places.

It had once been bright red, but time had changed it to something of dark brownish hue. Wishing to placate this strange acquaintance, however, the reporter remarked, gayly, and tried to smile in defiance of his chattering teeth. chattering teeth.

"I say, old fellow, I was going to sleep and you startled me, but I did not know you at first, I suppose I must have been shoving you towards the edge of the deak with my arm. But it was quite unintentionally, I assure you. Come, you'll pardon me like a good fellow, now. Won't you?" you. Come, you'll pardon me like a good fellow, now. Won't you?"

"Oh, yes; there's no harm done. If I was younger I don't know as I'd mind being thrown down. I am kinder tired of being closed up here all the time. I'd like to get out and travel again," said the brick. "But," he added, with a deep sigh, "I'm pretty old now, and am fearful that my travelling days are over."

The reporter went in sympathy with the travelling days are over."

The reporter wept in sympathy with the poor fellow's misery and finally asked:

"Are you very old, please?"

"About sixty-three."

"Indeed," then with a smile that was intended to be extra flattering, you don't look it. Where were you born?"

"In Philadelphia. My father was the famous Philadelphia Brick," he explained, proudly.

"Are you single or married?"

"Oh, I'm single! I believe marriage is a failure I mean to send a communication to THE EVENING WOLLD on that subject some How?" asked the astounded reporter. "You read the newspapers?"
"Oh, yes," with a superior smile, "I see 'em all, although I can't walk. The newspaper boys come in here and leave them on the table. I am always pleased when I see

THE EVENING WORLD. I like it best of all."

"Well, now you must have had some strange experience in your time. I'll tell you what I'll do. You make me your biographer and I'll furnish you with a copy of The Evening World every afternoon. I'll print your history in the paper and you'll become as famous as your father," said the reporter, now thoroughly at his ease.

"It's a go," agreed the brick. "Well, as I told you, I was born in Philadelphia, but I was not a day old when I learned that for urgent fanancial reasons a large number of my family, including myself, were to be banished from home.

"We were packed on board a schooner at night, and sailed for this town. Early one morning big, rough men took to stinging us six in a bunch from the boat up onto the dock, where other rude fellows fired us into wagons. That's where I received this terrible disfigurement, explained the poor brick, pointing to where the piece had been knocked off the corner.

"How was that?" asked the reporter.

"Why, when they throw me upon the dock the awkward catcher let me slip, and I fell, striking my head on a spike and knocking my corner off."

"Throw it overboard, quick,' said the fellow in the bost.

"'Why?" asked the other fellow.
"Because this Philadelphia brick is very costly, and they will dock you for breaking that one,' saud the other fellow.
"I fainted. When I regained consciousness I found myself in the bottom of a rowboat far out at sea, but oh, how changed. My life had been saved by a miracle, as I learned later. The fellow did throw me overboard, but I fell-in the rowboat without his knowing it. Better for me if I had drowned."
"Why so?"
"You have heard of people turning gray in a night? Well, from being a beauty bright, I turned a dirty purplish sort of a blue color. Then I became reckless.
"In this boat with me was a fisherman. He took me home with him, and then for years I associated with the very lowest class of bricks. Fire-bricks and old bricks with dirty mortar clinging to them became my steady companions.
"While I lived there I was used to keep a door open in Summer time, to block up a hole in the floor in Winter time, and do other menial services. I had a quots of vengeance, though. I fell on the baby's foot and mashed its little toes. The woman fired me outdoors and I struck her husband in the eye as he turned a corner. He went in and licked her.

"I haid low until the landlord came in to get his rent, when I tripped him up. He fell down and broke his nose, and got so mad that he insisted on dispossessing the whole family, so I don't think that family owes me anything.

"Day after they left the landlord fired me into the sircet. A vagon load of prick coming that way broke down, and the burst way I was azain among my blood relations.

"In this boat with me was a fisherman. He took me home with him, and then for years I associated with the very lowest class.

"In this boat with him, and then for years I associated with the will only the was a fisherman. He took me home with him, and then for years I suppose, but in an evil hour I chanced to see mine old enemy, the man who made me was the will over me. How my heart thrilled with joy.

"There my life passed pleasantly and quietly and I woul
